

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF STATE
VIRTUAL FELLOWS PROGRAM
PROJECT DESCRIPTION – EUR/WE

This project seeks a Virtual Fellow to serve with the Office of Western Europe, Bureau of European and Eurasian Affairs (EUR/WE) as a European Far-Right Parties Analyst.

Fellow Location: The Fellow will serve virtually and will not be physically located at the Department of State.

Project Name: Rise of the Far-Right Parties in Europe and Political Implications for U.S. Foreign Policy

Project Description: This project will look at the recent elections in Europe and the presumed successes of the right-wing parties. It should identify what the common issues are for the right, but point to the differences between them that may impede any pan-European coordination. It should challenge or confirm the notion of a “rise” of the right, as well as challenge or confirm the notion that all parties on the right are anti-immigrant, racist, or separatist. The project should also look at the general political picture in several key EUR/WE countries (UK, France, Belgium, Germany, the Netherlands, and Italy) to determine whether this “rise” of the right could benefit the center-left or center-right political parties. It should also examine the implications, if any, for several U.S. foreign policy objectives, namely: promoting the Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership (T-TIP) agreement, strengthening prospects for increased defense/security spending in Europe, responding to the threat of Foreign Fighters, combatting anti-Semitism, and promoting religious freedom.

Potential Fellow Taskings:

- Five-to-ten page policy paper, including a description of the issues and background, graph or info-graphic of where the parties stand on the various issues in the “right-wing” agenda and, what, if any, impacts they will have on U.S. foreign policy in Europe.
